Dovedale. Poor Staffordshire, to whom Dovedale half belongs, is almost neglected by lovers of the picturesque, yet the Staffordshire side of Dovedale is even more abundantly wooded than the Derbyshire bank, and has rocks as bold and beautiful. Dovedale, a perfectly harmonious and beautiful blend of wood, water and rock, is two miles long, and runs north from Thorpe Cloud to the Dove-Holes. Little weirs, smooth pools, rocky crags and green knolls abound along the course of the Dove.

Dear Sir,
I am sorry to hear you are going out. I hope you are enjoying it very much. I am sorry to hear you are going out. I hope you are enjoying it very much. I am sorry to hear you are going out. I hope you are enjoying it very much.
